Heatwave hits Ottawa

Ottawa is set to see record temperatures as a heat wave sweeps the province.

Health officials are warning the public to take it easy, keep hydrated and avoid heat exhaustion.

"When the weather gets extremely hot, everyone needs to pay attention to what we can do to protect ourselves. Heat stroke can be a serious illness," said Ontario Chief Medical Officer of Health Dr. Arlene King.

Ottawa paramedic spokesman J.P. Trottier put it more bluntly: "Heat stroke is a life-threatening condition."

Officials urge the public to drink plenty of water or natural fruit juices, eat, stick to air conditioned rooms and keep physical activity to early morning or late evening, when it's cooler.

Symptoms of heat stroke can include headache, heavy sweating, dizziness, confusion or other altered mental state, cramps, vomiting and fainting. Skin may become hot and dry, or there may be sweating due to high body temperature.

Hudak GPS plan panned

► Conservative leader's plan to monitor sex offenders with GPS tracking units won't prevent sex crimes, group who works with ex-cons says

@METRONEWS.CA

A group that works with sex offenders after they're released from prison is asking Progressive Conservative leader Tim Hudak to reconsider his plan to outfit the province's 14,000 registered sex offenders with GPS tracking units.

Susan Love, program co-ordinator with Circles of Support and Accountability, sent a letter on behalf of the group to Hudak yesterday saying they believe it will not actually prevent sex crimes.

That's partly because of the sheer number of sex offenders in Ontario, said

Love.

"There are 14,000 people, that's a lot of people to monitor, a lot of computer screens," she said. "It would probably only be used reactively after something's occurred."

Love said she is concerned the GPS would trigger many false alarms that police would have to respond to if, for instance, a sex offender were to take a bus that passes by a school.

She also said GPS doesn't help in cases where the offence occurs within families. In the extreme case of Jaycee Lee Dugard — who was kidnapped and held in the backyard of a paroled rapist in California for 18 years — the GPS unit would have just shown that he was at home the whole time, she added.

The group would rather see the cost — $50 million a year — go into prevention. However, in a few cases of extreme, repeat offenders, the GPS might be useful, Love said.

At a press conference in Ottawa yesterday, Hudak would not say if any of the money would go to police forces for the resources to respond to GPS calls, saying only he would work with police on the GPS program if he is elected.

"The sad reality is that sex offenders and child predators are at a high risk of re-offending," said Hudak.

Hudak said he would consider expanding the GPS program to include people convicted of other serious crimes.

Asked if he would consider using GPS to keep track of the convicts who would participate in the chain gangs he has pledged to create, he would not answer, saying "We'll have more to say about it between now and election day."

GPS could increase risk: Group

Circles of Support and Accountability has worked with about 30 sex offenders over the past nine years in Ottawa. So far, none have re-offended sexually and studies show that kind of group is able to reduce the risk the ex-convict will re-offend by 70 to 80 per cent, said program co-ordinator Susan Love.

Their program is effective because when volunteers support the ex-convicts they prevent them from being marginalized and reduce the stigma that comes with being a labelled a sex-offender, said Love.

► Love

A GPS unit has the potential to undo that work and actually increase the risk to community safety, she said.

"And our number one priority is no more victims—we're not pro-sex offender," she said. ● JESSICA SMITH

► Ontario Progressive Conservative leader Tim Hudak speaks at a news conference in front of a former grow-op house in southern Ottawa yesterday, where he promised to establish a registry of houses used to produce drugs. The announcement follows on his promise to force those on Ontario's sex offender registry to wear GPS locators.

Home buyers need drug-house registry, Hudak says

Progressive Conservative leader Tim Hudak stood in front of a former grow-op house in southern Ottawa yesterday and announced that his party would like to create a public registry of houses that were used to make or grow illegal drugs.

"Too often homes that have been former grow-ops and meth labs have been sold to unsuspecting families," he said. "If criminals used your new house as a grow-op, the excessive moisture from pot plants can lead to black mold that carries toxic substances and causes breathing problems."

Former meth labs can cause lung problems and illegal wiring changes to houses can cause them to catch on fire, he added.

The houses would go on the list based on information collected by the police and won't "cost taxpayers an additional dime," Hudak said.

Currently in Ottawa, houses go on a public list run by the city for 90 days after a bust, he said.

Under his plan, houses would stay on a list until they passed inspections that determine they are safe. Then they could be removed from the list so that homeowners could sell them at a good price.

Patricia Verge, provincial director of the Ontario Real Estate Association, said a registry is "necessary."

"We're told in Ottawa, at any time, there are 400-500 grow-ops in operation," she said. "More and more people are buying former grow-ops without even knowing."

Public registry could drive sex offenders out of reach, experts say

Tory leader Tim Hudak's plan to make the provincial sex offender registry public could backfire and drive offenders into hiding, experts say.

"If you disclose where these individuals are living in the community, it is not unusual that they become harassed and that may cause them to move underground, so we would not be able to have any control of these guys," said Sgt. Sue Crone, head of the Toronto Police Sex Offender Registry Enforcement Unit.

Offenders must register with local authorities and report to police each year afterward.

Authorities also conduct unannounced visits, checking up on those likely to re-offend about once a week. Low-risk individuals get about four check-ups annually.

Police issue an arrest warrant when an offender fails to register, but Crone says the non-compliance rate is "minimal."

An Important Notice for Adult Ontarians Living with Diabetes

Living with diabetes is not easy, but managing it day-to-day really means taking good care of yourself.

There are three key tests that people living with diabetes should receive on a regular basis. They are:

- the HbA1C blood glucose control test, which patients should receive at least every six months
- the LDL-C cholesterol test, which patients should receive every year
- a retinal eye exam, which patients should receive every two years

The Diabetes Testing Report was created to help inform your primary care provider (physician or nurse practitioner in a Nurse Practitioner-Led Clinic) of when you last had each of these three tests.

People living with diabetes who are tested regularly are better able to manage their diabetes and avoid complications. The Diabetes Testing Report will help you and your primary care provider better manage your diabetes care by reminding him or her if you are overdue for an HbA1C test, LDL-C test or retinal eye exam, and it will encourage you and your primary care provider to talk about your diabetes care.

Protecting Your Privacy

In order to create the Diabetes Testing Report, your primary care provider may share personal health information, including your name, OHIP number, and date of birth, with the Ministry of Health and Long-Term Care (MOHLTC). He or she will also confirm whether you have diabetes. In response, the MOHLTC will share the most recent dates of each of the three tests with your provider. Your privacy is important, and you are not required to have your information included in this report.

Deciding Not to Share Your Information

You may decide that you do not want your primary care provider to disclose your information to the MOHLTC, and that you do not wish to be included in your provider's Diabetes Testing Reports. If you choose to withhold or withdraw your consent, this will in no way affect your relationship with your health care provider and he or she will continue to provide care to you.

If you wish to withhold or withdraw your consent to having your information disclosed by your primary care provider and in any Diabetes Testing Reports that MOHLTC sends to your primary care provider, call 1-800-291-1405 (TTY: 1-800-387-5559). If you have previously withheld or withdrawn your consent to have your information included on the Diabetes Testing Report, you do not need to withhold or withdraw your consent again. If you wish to reinstate your consent, you can do so by calling the number above.

In Ontario, the Personal Health Information Protection Act, 2004 (PHIPA) is the legislation that governs the collection, use, retention, and disclosure of personal health information by health information custodians, including MOHLTC and primary care providers. For more information about the collection, use, and disclosure of your personal health information for the purposes of the Diabetes Testing Report, call the numbers listed above. 'I was too trusting': Murdoch Summoned by British lawmakers yesterday to account for a phone hacking and bribery scandal, Rupert Murdoch said he was humbled and ashamed but accepted no personal responsibility, insisting he was at fault only for trusting the wrong people at a now-defunct tabloid that made up a tiny portion of his vast media empire.

The 80-year-old media tycoon endured a three-hour grilling from lawmakers and escaped attempts to draw to tar him with individual blame for the scandal that has rocked his empire.

The scandal has become a page-turner of a drama, with scenes of private detectives hacking phones, cops being bribed for news tips, politicians being wined and dined and a murdered teenager whose phone messages were intercepted. And only a fraction of the nearly 4,000 people whose information was hacked are known and the police investigation appears to be widening.

"This is the most humble day of my career," said Murdoch.

He said he lost sight of News of the World because it is such a small part of his company and spoke to the editor of the paper only around once a month.

Fugitive could escape: Lawyer

- ▶ Prosecutors say he is connected to criminals
- ▶ Defence will argue possible execution if deported

A Chinese fugitive's links to organized crime in Canada make him a serious flight risk, a government lawyer claims.

Kevin Boothroyd, who represents the Canada Border Services Agency, said yesterday that evidence presented at Lai Changxing's hearing shows he not only had close contact with criminals, but he was doing business with them. Boothroyd said those connections could help Lai escape.

"Lai is in close contact with people who can facilitate his flight," Boothroyd said.

Vancouver Police Det. James Fisher told the hearing earlier that Lai's connections with the Big Circle Boys gang could enable him to get fake documents that could fool border officials.

Fisher said an informant, who he added was a long-time criminal he once paid off, was part of a conversation in which Lai talked about running a gaming house in B.C.

He said that while his source didn't see a bet made at the house in Richmond, B.C., he was present when Lai talked about his role in the illegal gambling den.

Lai is wanted in China over accusations he bilked the Communist government out of millions of tax dollars. He fled to Canada in 1999 and has been fighting deportation for 12 years.

Lai is seeking release from custody ahead of a federal court hearing tomorrow, when his lawyers will ask for a stay of his deportation, arguing that Lai could face torture or even execution at the hands of China's Communist regime. THE CANADIAN PRESS commander Christopher Ferguson and his crew.

Replied Ferguson: "It's been an incredible ride."

As a final salute, the space station rotated to provide never-before-seen views of the complex. Atlantis flew halfway around the outpost, cameras whirring aboard both craft to record the historic event.

Nashville spurns call centre after layoffs

A U.S. call centre company that laid off 1,200 Canadian workers — without warning, compensation or even their final paycheques — has lost a major deal with the City of Nashville.

Officials of the Tennessee capital said yesterday they were no longer in discussions with New York-based IQT Solutions to locate the business there.

Nashville had earlier said it would give the company $1.6 million in incentives to create 900 jobs in the city.

"We are dismayed about what happened in Canada and don't think workers anywhere should be treated that way," city official Matt Wiltshire said in a statement.

The Quebec and Ontario governments, meanwhile, are meeting the laid-off workers to see what can be done to help.

About 600 workers were laid off at offices in Oshawa, Ont., as well as 450 in Laval and 140 in Trois-Rivieres, Que., in a move that employees described as "savage."

Labour laws generally require employers to give two weeks' notice of a layoff and a minimum of four per cent of salary earned in the last year, generally considered vacation pay.

The Quebec labour board could take legal action against the company for not paying workers their outstanding wages and other money owed under Quebec laws on layoffs.

netic structure definitely came from the Neanderthals. And that applies to everyone who did not originate in sub-Saharan Africa.

The Neanderthals, you'll recall from school and the funny pages, were those not-quite ready-for-prime-time near-humans who were rendered extinct by the vastly superior Cro-Magnons — that is, us.

Neanderthals were typically depicted as knuckle-draggers with low-sloping foreheads and a tendency to bash first and ask questions later. The story was they didn't have the intellect — or the looks — to overcome their fate.

“Discovery News, in an attempt to set the record straight, reports they possessed the gene for language and had sophisticated music, art and tool-making skills, and their cranial capacity was as large as or larger than the competition's. It all adds up to sexy and smart if you're a Cro-Magnon looking to hook up.”

You'd better get in touch with your inner caveman, because there is conclusive evidence that our ancestors found their Neanderthal cousins attractive after all, maybe after a few fermented grain infusions, and those prehistoric boogie nights live on as part of our X chromosome.

The Neanderthals, like Britney Spears, were mainly victims of bad press. Discovery News, in an attempt to set the record straight, reports they possessed the gene for language and had sophisticated music, art and tool-making skills, and their cranial capacity was as large as or larger than the competition's. It all adds up to sexy and smart if you're a Cro-Magnon looking to hook up.

All this transpired between 30,000 and 50,000 years ago, which means that unless there are undiscovered cave paintings revealing exactly what happened, it's pretty much a matter of idle speculation, which has never stopped us before. You can bet, though, that despite all the sophisticated music and art, this smoking X chromosome is the result of some pretty dangerous liaisons: “No, you can't take her to the mastodon hunt. She's not your genotype.”

Of course, this is a godsend for those of us looking around for someone else to blame. “It's not my fault I got rib sauce all over my shirt front. My X chromosome is nine per cent Neanderthal.” For those of us who are politically correct, this is our cue to start feeling guilty for persecuting the Neanderthals. Obviously, they were here first. They invented fire. And in return, all we've ever done is steal their stuff, tell them sweet little lies and slander them in our textbooks. We've got a lot to answer for.

British actress Hayley Atwell has wasted no time in establishing herself. Her first film gig out of drama school was Woody Allen's Cassandra's Dream in 2007. Now she's taking on one of Earth's mightiest heroes in Captain America: The First Avenger as Peggy Carter, a British agent and love interest for the super-soldier who also happens to be quite handy with a machine gun. Atwell sat down with Metro to talk about making her mark, finding good roles and returning to the stage.

Have you thought about how much your profile could be raised once this movie comes out?

No, I haven't. I really haven't. Because you can't really expect anything, really. You're kind of trying to take every moment and experience as it comes, and also be very independent of it and not have too many expectations of how the film will be received.

I hope, if anything, that it would mean that I could get the experience or the opportunity to work with other directors I wouldn't have in the past because they wouldn't have seen my work. So in that respect, I hope that's a positive thing to come out of it, but apart from that I think it's kind of out of my hands. The world will decide what they want to do with it.

Your character is far from a damsel in distress. In fact, she's a hero in her own right.

I loved that in the script and thought she was so strong and capable and a match for him. They needed each other; there was a kind of a weakness in him that she was able to help and to guide.

What I liked about her is — it seemed in the script and I really hope it comes across in the film — she really likes him for who he is. It felt like a very innocent, sweet relationship.

Is it difficult to find roles like that, that are so interesting and well-defined?

There's been amazing roles for women through the ages of film and literature. I don't think there's a shortage of it.

I suppose it's just that there's so many more actresses now, so there's more competition.

But also the fashion of the image of what actresses should look like has, I think, kind of steered the focus away from these incredible qualities that women have to more of the aesthetics, which means some actresses could tend to focus more on that aspect of it.

Not to badmouth anyone at all, but you kind of sometimes watch films and go, 'Really? Is that a good role model? I don't think so.' Surely we've moved on from that.

You're also very active in the theatre, where that problem doesn't exist as much.

I've always wanted to go back and do that because it's always been really important to me, because it does scare the living day-lights out of me and keeps me acutely aware of exactly where my skills or my weaknesses are more than anything else.

I feel like on the stage I have more of an opportunity to learn and to work with some real magicians.

How do you think the London theatre scene compares to New York?

I haven't spent enough time in New York in terms of getting a sense of how the plays are, but what I thought was brilliant is the plays that do well in the West End transfer to Broadway — you have Jerusalem or Through a Glass Darkly or The Pride, all this stuff, which is great.

It means that those plays are starting off in Britain and having a life elsewhere. America seems to be very responsive and welcoming to that and wants to kind of celebrate those plays.

But you've got some of the greatest playwrights ever — Tennessee Williams, Arthur Miller, incredible playwrights.

IT IS 'SERIOUS' ABOUT THIS ACTING THING

IN FOCUS

RICHARD CROUSE
SCENE@METRONWS.CA

Justin Timberlake is many things: music superstar, a booze baron (he owns a brand of tequila called 901), and all round mogul with a clothing line, restaurants and a record label.

All that at just 30 years of age. But like so many singing stars before him, it seems what he really wants to do is act.

In fact, he once said he believes it was always in the cards for him to be an actor.

"I got a phone call when I was 14 saying that there's a record company that's going to sign me. But two weeks before that, the plan was to drive to Los Angeles for TV pilot season. So I guess everything works out the way it's supposed to."

Fate aside, is his desire to act justified?

From his film debut in the 2000 Disney Channel movie Model Behavior to this weekend's Friends with Benefits, there have been the highest of highs and the lowest of lows.

He's earned praise from his co-stars. "I only had a couple of scenes with him but he did a really great job," said his Alpha Dog co-star Bruce Willis.

But critics and bloggers haven't always been so kind. "Dear Justin Timberlake," read a 2010 blog headline, "STOP ACTING!"

Forgettable supporting roles in flops like Edison, Black Snake Moan and Southland Tales did little to enhance his reputation, but didn't hurt it much either.

Everything changed when he was cast in The Social Network. His take on the fast talking Sean Parker, inventor of Napster and an early supporter of Facebook, was his breakthrough and won praise from critics.

That inspired performance, coupled with hilarious guest shots on Saturday Night Live have earned him the respect of the industry and fans, but he still doesn't have his pick of roles.

Even though he didn't get the lead in The Green Lantern ("I don't think I'm the superhero type," he joked), he wants everyone to know he's willing to put himself out there.

"I make no bones about the fact that I have always wanted to work in the forum of film," he says.

"I take this seriously."

Watson sets record straight about school

► Admits to feeling claustrophobic while living in U.K. because of her fame

With the Harry Potter films behind her, Emma Watson is heading back to school, except she'll be attending Oxford University instead of heading back to her U.S. university, according to ABC News.

"I haven't left Brown. I'm still enrolled at Brown. But I'm doing my third year abroad. I'm going to Oxford in the fall to study English for a year," she explains. "I'll go back to the States to do my last year."

Though she does admit that she enjoys how she feels less famous in the U.S. than in the U.K.

"I suddenly felt very claustrophobic. I thought, 'I can't stay here, I won't be able to concentrate, I won't be left alone,'" she says. "I don't want to put a negative light on it, as if I was escaping or anything like that. I think I wanted to meet people my own age and just be normal for a bit." ● METRO

Slowing down in Penticton

► There's nothing like a little wine therapy and al fresco dining to soothe the senses ► Retreat to Okanagan's relaxing wine country

GIZELLE LAU
LIFE@METRONEWS.CA

A life lived in the fast lane is never as blatantly obvious as when you're travelling, where access to the Internet — let alone a reliable 3G network — is limited and life/news updates via Twitter are not at your fingertips.

On the southern rim of Lake Okanagan, British Columbia's increasingly prominent wine region, you'll find townships like Summerland, Penticton and Naramata where "slow" is a way of life.

Slowing down begins in Naramata at Red Rooster Winery where every Friday morning, yoga instructor Teresa G. Maurer of Re:Flexions Studio in Penticton, leads Yoga D'Vine, a morning of yoga and sun salutes in the vineyard under the bright blue sky, accompanied with a light lunch on the terrace with wine and chocolate tastings.

Next up, more tabletop wine therapy on the massage table at Beyond Wrap-ture. With four locations throughout the valley, this Finish off the evening at Local Lounge & Grille just steps from the spa, where local cuisine and seasonally inspired dishes set the stage for one of the best wine menus in the region, offering exclusively British Columbia VQA wines from the Okanagan Valley.

Slowing down can also mean ditching the car. Bring your own bike or rent one from Freedom The Bike Shop in Penticton and cycle from winery to winery through the hilly, vine-filled landscape or along the historic Kettle Valley Railway bike trail.

Miami's hot graffiti scene

► Once derided as vandalism, graffiti in the form of artistic murals has now become an accepted art form ► Visitors seek out the very best

Graffiti was once considered a sign of urban decay, the sort of thing that might keep tourists away from a neighbourhood. Now, not only is it an accepted art form, but it's also the subject of a new tour in one of Miami's trendiest neighbourhoods, Wynwood, where legal outdoor murals by graffiti artists cover the walls near art galleries and restaurants.

The two-hour tour — which takes place on Vespas — is offered by a company called Roam Rides. It starts with a 15-minute ride from Miami Beach over the Venetian Causeway to the Wynwood Arts District, considered the mecca of Miami's emerging arts scene, and includes four or five stops to survey the area's best graffiti.

Once considered a rough neighbourhood, Wynwood has become a destination for artists from all over the world. Art galleries abound and events are held here each December as part of the Art Basel Miami Beach art fair.

Wynwood is also now home to one of the world's largest installations of murals by multiple graffiti artists.

"It's gotten to be so pervasive and it brightens up the neighbourhood," said Kit Sullivan of Roam Rides.

"It's so not what you would expect of Miami," said Jesse Bull, an economics professor who took one of Roam Rides' recent graffiti fi tours. "The graffiti has kind of added to that. It livens it up and makes it fresh and artsy and I think that's a good thing."

Guides point out work by different local artists — such as Typoe and Tribe Called Phresh aka TCP — while explaining the evolution of graffiti from the days when artists plastered their names on vacant buildings and train cars as a way to gain street cred.

These days, building owners give permission to artists to spray-paint their designs, and these legal pieces share the walls of dozens of neighbourhood art galleries and chic restaurants.

They're easy to distinguish from illegal graffiti, which is often done fast, in secret and at night, with a single colour or few colours. The sanctioned murals, on the other hand, allow artists to take their time, use multiple colours and work in-depth in large spaces with elaborate details.

"It's definitely a changing art form," Sullivan said. "It's gotten to the point where a lot of these guys don't even use their names at all. They just have a certain distinctive style. You can recognize it when you see it."

For example, artist Chor Boogie's signature work includes geometric elements and half-hidden faces, as well as an eye.

The Muppets Take...Queens, N.Y.

► A Big Apple exhibit explores the creative process of Jim Henson, creator of the beloved puppet characters

The Jim Henson Company and curator of Jim Henson's Fantastic World.

"Jim was the first one to recognize that you can use television and get these incredibly expressive and believable performances out of puppets," Falk said. "This is why puppetry looks like this on television, because of this man."

The touring exhibit is making its last stop of a multi-year trip at the Museum of the Moving Image in Queens, where it will be on display into January.

It's fitting that the final stop is in New York — the museum is near Kaufman Astoria Studios, where Sesame Street is taped. Henson's puppet creations including Big Bird and Bert and Ernie have been a vital part of what has made the children's show a global success for decades.

It seems so familiar to us now — puppet characters on television that are so real, so expressive, so alive that we forget there's a human being doing the actual work behind the scenes.

There's a reason that's so familiar, say the organizers of an exhibit that opened last weekend in

New York say: Jim Henson.

The master puppeteer and media innovator behind pop culture icons such as Kermit the Frog and Big Bird was a creative thinker who understood the opportunities that television and technology presented, said Karen Falk, archivist for

The final stop is also getting something other locations didn't. Joining the drawings, cartoons and puppets on display is Miss Piggy, decked out as a bride from her stint in The

► With the summer weather making everyone dread standing over a hot stove for too long, a sandwich-and-salad combo is perfect ► This isn't your regular ham and cheese on toast

MATTHEW MEAD/ THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

It was late. My son was hungry, tired and cranky. We'd just arrived at our rental apartment and there was virtually no food in the refrigerator. All I could scrounge were some slices of whole-wheat bread, sliced ham and cream cheese. So I combined them into what was a surprise instant hit.

Now that we're back home, I decided to play with it a bit to see if I could up the nutrition. So I added baby spinach and sun-dried tomatoes.

Now it wasn't just delicious, but also ever-so-slightly more nutritious.

From lunch to landing the job

STUDENT VOICE

AKSHAY KOCHAR
TALENTEGG.CA

It was March, university would be done in another month and I had yet to put any thought into what I wanted to do next. It didn't help that everyone would ask, "So, you're almost done. Any jobs lined up?"

I'm sure every student reading this can relate.

During that time, I was interning at Guardly, a position I had obtained after seeing it on TalentEgg. I was learning a lot about the technology community in Toronto, and was amazed at the quality of start-ups that the city was producing. During this internship, and with a little help from one of my university professors, I found Agility CMS, a content management company.

I contacted one of the

What I learned

Key take-aways from Akshay's experience:

- ▶ Informational interviews are a great way to learn about an industry or a specific job within an industry. They also provide you with a contact that could, if you're lucky, lead to a job down the road.
- ▶ Look for jobs in unconventional places and always be prepared with a quick pitch that explains what you can bring to the company.

co-founders and introduced myself. Thankfully, he was willing to take some time out of his day to do an informational interview with me over lunch. This was a great experience as it allowed me to learn more about his company and the industry as a whole.

We kept in touch after that lunch via email and, about a month later when a position became available, he asked me if I was interested in going through the interview process.

So, one lunch interview, two phone interviews, two in-person interviews and a full reference check later, I graciously accepted Agility's offer to become their new project co-ordinator.

I strongly urge employers to take the risk on recent graduates.

Find out more about which program they took and what types of courses were involved. There are so many new programs out there that give students a tremendous amount of knowledge and experience.

For instance, the Digital Enterprise Management program at the University of Toronto Mississauga enables students to learn about business, marketing, design, project management and entrepreneurship. This broad skill-set allows the recent graduate to apply themselves in a vast array of positions in any company.

Sure, someone who has worked in the industry may have some advantages over a recent graduate, however, I can confidently say that because recent graduates have the urge to continue learning, they can apply themselves just as efficiently.

For students, I cannot stress enough the importance of networking in any way possible.

Whether it's at a formal networking event or in the line-up of a fast food restaurant. Perhaps the person about to order a foot-long chicken teriyaki sub is actually the CEO of that marketing company you've been trying to apply at. Be ready, your elevator pitch just became your Subway pitch.

It is also important to build a personal relationship with the company you are trying to apply to. The best way to do this is to send an email to whomever you think can help you obtain the position you want. This could be the VP of the department you want to work in, or the head of HR.

TALENTEgg.CA, CANADA'S ONLINE CAREER RESOURCE FOR STUDENTS AND RECENT GRADS, WANTS TO HEAR YOUR STUDENT VOICE. SHARE IT AT TALENTEgg.CA.

Where Akshay is now

Although I received another job offer (besides Agility) about one month after graduating, I knew the position with Agility better suited my skills and had more potential for growth. So, although I had yet to obtain the position with Agility, I took a risk and turned down the first offer. Then, I did everything possible to ensure I received that second offer.

Thankfully, I did receive an offer from Agility and will be starting my role as Project Co-ordinator in the near future!

BE UPFRONT WHEN ILL

WORKPLACE LAW

DANIEL LUBLIN
DAN@CANADA
EMPLOYMENTLAWYER.COM
TWITTER: @DANLUBLIN

There is a new war being waged in Canadian workplace law, and its battleground is not even a courtroom.

This conflict unfolds at doctors' offices when employees claim that they are too sick to work and employers stubbornly disagree. The result is usually a letter-writing war between medical experts, insurance claims examiners and eventually the lawyers.

Employees are entitled to "accommodation" for illnesses and disabilities (even perceived ones), and employers must take all reasonable steps to comply.

Although the law may be clear-cut, the facts are seldom straightforward. A "headache" to one physician may be a chronic illness to another. Given the potential for confusion, disputes often arise. When faced with a challenged sick leave claim, employees ought to do as follows:

Do not assume that your employer can read your mind. Put your request for a leave in writing and say that you will immediately visit your doctor to confirm your illness.

When you see your doctor, ensure that he or she provides a letter and one with a real explanation. The single most common cause of an incredulous employer is a medical note that simply states that you are "off work until further notice." If you are too sick to do your job, your doctor must say that you cannot perform any work at all, even modified employment.

Do not rashly resist a request for better medical information. In my experience, employees too often refuse to provide further evidence that they are ill. When they do so, they appear as if they are lying. While you do not need to disclose every detail about a medical condition, some details are necessary for the employer to determine how best to accommodate you upon your return to work.

If you are prescribed a medical treatment plan, follow it. I have seen many sick leave claims rejected because the employee refused or "forgot" to follow a doctor's instructions.

Do not consider sick leave an entitlement.

Canadian gets the assist

► Hesjedal helps Hushovd win rainy 16th stage of Tour de France
► Voeckler still leads race, but Contador and Evans make gains

Canadian Ryder Hesjedal raised his arms in jubilation as he crossed the finish line yesterday.

The 30-year-old from Victoria was third, but he had just scored a glorious assist to help Garmin-Cervelo teammate Thor Hushovd win the 16th stage of the Tour de France.

Hesjedal, who came into the stage 32nd overall in the standings, attacked midway through the 162.5-kilometre course. While others fell back or launched their own attacks, he persevered.

There were just three men left in the rain as the finish line neared: Hesjedal and two Norwegians, Hushovd and Edvald Boasson Hagen.

The Canadian led the way, looking back at Hagen on his shoulder as he shifted position in the final sprint. Hushovd, one of cycling's marquee men, hung back and then accelerated while Hagen wasn't looking. He rocketed over the line, with his Norwegian rival second and a delighted Hesjedal third, two seconds behind.

It was Garmin-Cervelo's fourth stage win of the Tour.

"It was great. This Tour's been so good for our team," Hesjedal told The Canadian Press.

"For me, there's been highs and lows. To have a big high today and ride well, it's definitely going "To be able to push the pace and get close to the win and make the win happen for the team — it doesn't get better than that."

to be remembered."

Hesjedal showed his endurance during the stage and then his smarts at the end.

"Thor's obviously one of the fastest guys in the world and so is Edvald, so we just had to make sure we played it exactly right to come up with the victory," he said.

Hesjedal's own general classification hopes were dashed the first week when he lost time and was hurt in a crash on Stage 7.

But he continues to ride for the team, supporting American Tom Danielson while contributing to the Garmin-Cervelo overall campaign — the times from the top three riders from each squad is counted in the team standings.

Hesjedal was seventh in last year's race, when he had two fourth-place individual stage finishes.

He moved up four places to 28th overall after his heroics yesterday and stands 20 minutes 36 seconds behind leader Thomas Voeckler of France.

Lightning lock up Stamkos until 2016

Steven Stamkos finally has a new deal with the Tampa Bay Lightning.

The 21-year-old forward signed a $37.5-million US, five-year contract extension yesterday, ending a set of negotiations that extend all the way back to last year.

"I am excited we were able to reach an agreement today," Stamkos said in a release. "This was obviously very important to me ... There is no place I'd rather be than as a member of the Tampa Bay Lightning."

Stamkos had been a restricted free agent since July 1 and there was much speculation he'd be the target of an offer sheet.

Stamkos will receive $8 million each of the next four seasons and $5.5 million in 2015-16.

Engine

The Accent's slick new body styles are matched with an equally slick 1.6-litre engine that produces 138 horsepower and 123 pound-feet of torque. Both numbers are substantially better than the outgoing 1.6's 110 horses and 106 pound-feet.

Since the Accent's curb weight remains essentially unchanged, the higher output gives the Accent considerably more pep.

Shape: All in the family

The sedan's new sheetmetal contains Hyundai's familial shape that has already been imprinted on the Sonata and Elantra models, especially the deeply sculpted crease extending along the doors and fenders and ending with a hiked-up rear deck.

The same is essentially true for the wagon-like hatchback, although its sweeping roofline, curvaceous liftgate and dominating taillamps make it the most practical Accent and arguably the best looking of the two.

Direct injection, emissions

The new powerplant benefits from the latest in engine-building technology, including direct injection whereby precise amounts of highly pressurized fuel is sprayed into the combustion chamber (instead of through the intake manifold) which means more power and reduced emissions.

As well, a special hard diamond-based coating has been added to the engine's camshaft components to reduce valvetrain friction.

► Hyundai's focus used to be on inexpensive transportation — period. But now you can add style, pep and fuel economy to the description.

Finally there's an Accent that boasts style

What took Hyundai so long?

For six long model years (2006-'11), the Korea-based automaker kept churning out the same basic Accent econo-car while the competition was busy updating or completely renewing its basic-transportation offerings.

Whatever the reason, the long wait ends now with the release of the fourth-generation Accent duo.

The outgoing two-door hatch and four-door sedan could never be considered the sharpest models on the lot. With their understated blob-like shapes, both represented the last vestiges of Hyundai's school of anonymous automotive styling and would have made ideal conveyances for those entering a witness-protection program. They also remained relatively spartan and lacked the assortment of standard and optional features that customers expect in their small cars these days. All that has passed. The 2012 Accent, still available in four-door sedan and hatchback formats, appears to be yet another game-changing model for Hyundai. This one should present a formidable challenge to such pack leaders as the Honda Fit, Ford Fiesta and Mazda2, to highlight just a few.

Given the sedan's $14,700 on-the-street base price, it appears that small-car power, hospitable roominess, fuel efficiency and affordability are at the top of the Accent's menu. And at long last, so is style.

BACKING UP HARDER THAN BREAKING UP

AUTO PILOT

MIKE GOETZ
DRIVE
@METRONEWS.CA

There are more back-up songs than back-up songs, which is strange, because more people get hurt backing up.

And this is real, physical hurt, not that flakey emotional stuff you can fix with a bit of Haagen-Dazs.

"Backing up is the highest risk activity you can do with a vehicle," says Brain Patterson of the Ontario

Safety League. "If a crash is the result of a low-speed impact, chances are someone was backing up."

The Ontario Safety League has been around since 1913 and is recognized as one of North America's leading traffic safety organizations. Its mandate is "safety through education." Needless to say, the League has looked at a lot of carnage since 1913.

"We seem to be making headway in a whole bunch of areas," notes Patterson.

"But there are two areas that are constantly at issue. Male drivers between 16 and 24. And crashes involving backing up."

Patterson has a few theories on why backing up is still a heavy hitter on the unsafe scene.

He feels a lot of people don't do it enough to get proficient at it. And he feels people are just less courteous these days.

"I'm walking through a ► Say "cheese." A rear-view camera can shoot the driver the image of these bicycles, which are in this SUV's blind spot.

parking lot, say at a shopping mall. I see you backing up, but instead of walking in front of the vehicle, I keep walking behind your moving vehicle."

Patterson and I were speaking at a parking lot, where Canadian Tire was allowing media to sample its exclusive line of back-up related safety products from Yada: Rearview Mirror Back-up Camera with Speakerphone (via Blue Tooth); Dash Mounted Back-up Camera; Back-up Sensor System; Blind Spot Assist System.

These safety systems are becoming increasingly available on new vehicles, especially on larger and/or luxury ones. And good thing, too. Because as Mandi Paquin-Johnson of Canadian Tire notes, "bigger vehicles mean bigger blind spots."

So if you're not quite ready, willing, or able to shell out for a new vehicle equipped with all these features, you now have the option of adding them to your current ride. The Yada line runs from $149 to $249 (plus installation, though some folks will be able to do it themselves).

I think rear-view cameras are awesome. Not only do they allow you to back up with precision, they flush out any low-lying obstacles (or small folk!) that are directly behind your vehicle, and therefore undetectable from any side or rear-view mirror.

Patterson notes these electronic systems are especially helpful to drivers who have physical limitations, especially with upper body mobility.

Of course there is a caveat... "They don't replace good driving practices. They enhance good driving practices," says Patterson.

Sportiness and style in a crossover

► Rogue loved for fuel-efficient performance and handling

SECOND GEAR

JUSTIN PRITCHARD
DRIVE@METRONEWS.CA

Nissan's replacement for the XTrail, Rogue competes with machinery like the Ford Escape, Dodge Nitro and Honda CR-V with an eye for sportiness and style.

All Rogue models got a 2.5-litre, 170-horsepower four-cylinder engine with a Continually Variable Transmission (CVT) with available paddle-shift.

Front-wheel drive was standard, and four wheel drive was optional. Rogue's AWD system featured automatic operation and a "lock" mode for low-traction situations.

Trim designations include "S" for a more basic Rogue, and "SL" for higher-end models. AWD, not surprisingly, denotes the presence of the AWD system on either trim level.

What Owners Like

Rogue owners typically rave about a comfortable ride, plenty of features for the money and the machine's unique design. Most also claim to experience great fuel mileage.

What's the 4-1-1

- Model: : 2008 to 2010 Nissan Rogue.
- Vehicle type: Crossover SUV.

► Nissan Rogue

Sporty handling and all-weather traction round out the list of owner-stated positives.

What Owners Dislike

Numerous Rogue drivers complain of limited rearward visibility that translates into difficulty parking, as well as a small and "busy" instrument cluster. Some owners wish for a quieter ride and more headroom, too.

Common Issues

When test driving a Rogue, be sure to travel at parking-lot speeds with the stereo and climate control fan off, listening for any strange noises from the transmission.

Clicking, grinding, grumbling and popping sounds should not be considered normal, and have been reported by several owners ahead of an in-warranty transmission replacement.

In some cases, a computer reprogramming may solve the CVT noise problem. In either case, if the transmission in the Rogue you're considering is making any strange noises, be sure to have it checked out.

An inspection by a Nissan-trained mechanic is advised for any used Rogue ahead of purchase.

A full check of all cabin electronics is advised, as is a check of the carpeting in the wheelwells and cargo area for potential water leaks from the sunroof drain tubes or hatch seal, respectively.

The Verdict

A used Rogue will likely provide owners with satisfying fuel economy, all-season performance and driving dynamics — though shoppers should seek out a clean bill of health for the CVT transmission from a Nissan mechanic before purchase.

A newer model with plenty of factory warranty remaining is the safest bet.

Take a look at our sample story and then get writing!

Every road trip offers...

... memories to last a lifetime, but my most memorable was spent touring the Rocky Mountains in Alberta with my family. My parents packed my brother and me, aged 9 and 13, into our family SUV for a two-week trip.

I'm sure there were squabbles along the way, but when I look back I recall wonderful moments. I remember sunny days, stopping for ice cream at viewpoints along the highway, singing along to popular radio hits as we wound through the mountains and countless giggles as we entertained ourselves with silly road trip games like "I Spy".

But by far, the best part of our road trip was an unexpected adventure along the way. On an excursion to Lake Louise we took a wrong turn, and found ourselves driving down a secluded road underneath a canopy of trees, all alone except for an occasional sighting of wildlife. The views were spectacular and no one was in a hurry to return to the highway, so we carried on.

Eventually, the pavement became bumpy gravel. Crawling along at 10km an hour, we finally came to the end of the road – with a magnificent vista in view: sparkling turquoise water encircled by rugged mountains. Rather than reaching our planned destination, we had accidentally discovered Lake Moraine, a pristine glacial lake, far away from the touristy crowds. We sat still and quiet in the car, taking in the breathtaking view and realizing how lucky we were to get lost after all.

Hybrid vehicles use a combination of a gasoline engine and an electric motor to power them. The electricity comes from a battery pack that is continuously recharged while the car is being driven, mostly through a process called regenerative braking.

"Regenerative braking means that we decelerate the vehicle via the hybrid drivetrain," says Claus Halder, development engineer for recuperation and brake systems at Audi in Germany.

The company will introduce its first production hybrid model, the Q5 Hybrid SUV, in the Canadian market next year.

Like most hybrids available today, the Q5 Hybrid runs on its gasoline engine, on the battery alone, or on a combination of the two, depending on the type of driving and how hard the driver is accelerating.

When the driver has his foot on the throttle (the "gas pedal"), power is sent to turn the drive shafts, which then turn the wheels. Depending on driving conditions, this power is provided by the electric motor, by the gasoline engine, or with the two working together.

When the driver takes his foot off the throttle, the electric motor automatically reverts and works like a generator. It takes the spinning power of the drive shafts and converts it into electricity, almost the same way as a waterfall spins a turbine to produce power.

This electricity is then fed back into the battery to recharge it.

A beneficial side effect is that as the electric motor converts the spinning energy, it also slows down the drive shafts, which in turn slows down the car.

Although the electric motor is not connected to the conventional braking system, the regenerative system captures even more energy when the driver uses the brakes, which in turn puts more electricity back into the battery.
